Abstract. Milan Nedeljković (1857–1950), the founder and the first director of Belgrade Observatory, published his annual reports of its activities in the period 1898–1925. These reports are very important presenting precious material on Observatory's history, on the pioneering observational activity and professional cultivation of astronomy and meteorology in Serbia. They also contain his reflexions on various events, along with some memoirist elements.
